UBC hires on the basis of merit and is committed to employment equity

There are limited funds available from the School to be used in support of graduate students and they are awarded on a competitive basis. The selection criteria include grade point average, letters of reference, and other evidence of scholarly activity. Successful candidates will be notified of their assignments in early summer.

[†]Teaching Assistants are paid to help instructors with overall course delivery and evaluation. Duties may include setting up labs and classroom equipment, marking assignments and exams, conducting labs, and invigilating final exams. Assignments range from 96 to 192 hours.

ELIGIBILITY: Master's students may be awarded Teaching Assistantships for a maximum of two years during their first two years in the program.
Doctoral students may be awarded Teaching Assistantships for a maximum of four years during their first four years in the program. Reassignment after the first year is dependent upon satisfactory academic achievement and execution of TA responsibilities.
